This book corresponds to the teaching book of FESSH 2018. It includes all topics related to fractures of the hand and carp. Each chapter is written by a reference author in his/her subject. It is not a book of consensus but rather a book trying to be as exhaustive as possible even if the various authors tend to privilege their habits.

The book is divided into several parts: general considerations about indications, different materials, different types of patients. A second part describes the fractures of phalanges, then metacarpals and finally carp. This book will provide a good general idea but will require to be supplemented by other readings to deepen a particular point.
