

American Journal of Preventive Medicine

AJPM CME Program Announcement

Dear Members of APTR and ACPM and subscribers of AJPM,

Re: Changes to the offering of Continuing Medical Education (CME) units for articles published in the American Journal of Preventive Medicine (AJPM).

The AJPM Board of Governors voted on a six-month suspension of CME offerings starting with articles published in the January 2020 issue. During this suspension, AJPM will evaluate participation levels and impact of this action to members of each sponsoring society, as well as to all subscribers of the Journal to determine future status of CME offerings in AJPM.

AJPM will continue to offer CME for those articles already published and in the portfolio for three years from publication date in accordance with the American Council of Continuing Medical Education (ACCME) standards. We encourage you to plan ahead for any necessary CME needs and please don't hesitate to contact your member organization should you have questions or concerns about this decision.

We appreciate your support as we strive to offer timely, effective and efficient benefits to the prevention and population health academic and practice community.

Sincerely,

Donna Grande, MGA
CEO, ACPM

Allison Lewis
Executive Director, ATPR

Matthew L. Boulton, MD, MPH
Editor-in-Chief, AJPM