Editorial

Dear readers of the Journal of Clinical Virology

After a period of 10 years as Co-Editor-in Chief of the journal, Dr Christine Ginocchio has decided to retire from this position as of November 2018. She has decided that it is time for a new person to take over this role, and wants to spend more time with her family. It has been a pleasure to work with Christine for the last 7 years to make the journal successful and of interest for our readers. She will for sure not say farewell to the field of clinical virology, as she will continue as an Editorial Board member and we will meet her on different occasions, at meetings or committees or maybe research collaborations.

It is my pleasure also to introduce and welcome Dr. Benjamin Pinsky as a successor of Christine as Co-Editor-in Chief of the journal, who has been an Associate Editor since 2016. Ben is an associate professor at the Stanford University School of Medicine and the Medical Director of the Clinical Virology Laboratory for Stanford Health Care and Stanford Children's Health. I am sure we can continue the success of the journal in the years ahead of us.
