FROM THE EDITOR

Dear Colleagues,

I want to begin this letter with a greeting to all. With due respect, I would like to take this opportunity to introduce myself as the new Editor-In-Chief of the Journal of Vascular Nursing. It is an honor to service the needs of our society members, colleagues, and patients. For over thirteen years in active clinical practice, it is important to bring current topics, cutting-edge technology, and research for clinical practice application. Through our journal, dissemination of information and research is shared and transitioned into clinical practice worldwide.

As I transition into my new role, I would like to continue the exemplary work my predecessor, Cindy Lewis, MSN, RN, ACNS-BC, has accomplished with encouraging manuscript submissions worldwide. Vascular surgery has some of the most complex patient care plans with treatment that are palliative at times, prolonging the inevitable. A continued passionate dedication is essential to successful integration of research into the clinical realm. As an initiative to growing our journal, I would encourage collegial partnership with our Society of Vascular Nursing and Society of Vascular Surgery. Albert Einstein states, "It is the supreme art of the teacher to awaken joy in creative expression and knowledge." We are all life learners. Dissemination of knowledge leads to an integrative network of successful outcomes in patient care.

I would like to thank Cindy Lewis, MSN, RN, ACNS-BC, for all of her dedicated years to the journal. She has been instrumental in the great success of our journal. I look forward to working with our publisher, society members, and international colleagues in gaining many accomplishments. It is a privilege and an honor to serve as your new editor. I look forward to future success.
