

Policy Statement

Policy statements and clinical policies are the official policies of the American College of Emergency Physicians and, as such, are not subject to the same peer review process as articles appearing in the journal. Policy statements and clinical policies of ACEP do not necessarily reflect the policies and beliefs of Annals of Emergency Medicine and its editors.

Medical Cannabis

Originally approved June 2019

0196-0644/$-see front matter

Copyright © 2019 by the American College of Emergency Physicians.

Medical Cannabis

[Ann Emerg Med. 2019;74:e93.]

The American College of Emergency Physicians (ACEP) believes that scientifically valid and well-controlled clinical trials conducted under federal investigational new drug applications are necessary to assess the safety and effectiveness of all new drugs, including cannabis and cannabis derivative products, for medical use. Currently, in many states, cannabis and related cannabinoids are being recommended for patient use by physicians when little evidence has been provided in regard to their appropriate indications, efficacy, dosages, and precautions. ACEP supports the rescheduling of cannabis and encourages the Food and Drug Administration, Drug Enforcement Administration, and other appropriate organizations to facilitate scientifically valid, well-controlled studies of the use of cannabis and cannabis derivative products for treatment of disease and of their influence on societal health.

Approved June 2019

Originally approved June 2019

<https://doi.org/10.1016/j.annemergmed.2019.07.034>