

Reviewers of the year

Many thanks to our reviewers

High quality of published research cannot be achieved without high quality peer review of submitted manuscripts. Good reviews are critical, but also provide authors with constructive comments to make their manuscripts even better. As an editorial team, we are extremely grateful to all our colleagues who have volunteered their expertise and have taken time out of their busy schedules to participate in the peer review for our journal. They helped us to make good editorial decisions and to safeguard the quality of the papers that were published in the past year. The names of all reviewers are listed on the next pages.

Annual JCE Reviewer Award

Each year, we honor two outstanding reviewers with the JCE Reviewer Award. The nominations for the Award from JCE's two editorial offices were discussed during the recent editorial retreat. Key criteria for nomination included: high quality of the submitted reviews (both critical and constructive, and making the essential points without forgetting relevant details), responding in time, and being available for reviews when invited. After careful review of all our peer reviewers, we are pleased to highlight the achievements of: Annette M O'Connor and Tim Morris. More information about these reviewers is on the right hand column. Well done, Annette and Tim!

Annette M O'Connor

Dr. O'Connor is a veterinary epidemiologist who works in the area of research synthesis related to food production, public health, food safety, and uses of animals. This work involves combining research is transparent and comprehensive ways that ensure maximum value is obtained from societies investment in research funding. Dr. O'Connor is a co-author of the REFLECT statement and the STROBE-VET statements, both reporting guidelines designed to improve the reporting of veterinary research. Dr. O'Connor's outreach program relates to extending knowledge about methods in epidemiology and research synthesis, and primary research findings related to food safety and infectious diseases. She is an associate editor for several journals and a frequent peer-reviewer. Dr. O'Connor is Professor of Epidemiology at Iowa State University.

Tim Morris

Tim Morris is a senior medical statistician at the MRC Clinical Trials Unit at UCL and an honorary lecturer at LSHTM. He began his professional life working as a trial statistician and a statistical consultant, which drove him towards improving statistical methods. His interests include missing data and sensitivity analysis, analysis of randomised trials, non-proportional hazards, and the re-randomisation design. Tim has one unhealthy obsession with simulation studies and another with data visualisation and is working on both.
